The following document briefly describes a number of funding programs related to community and regional economic development. Although the majority are Government of Canada and Government of Alberta programs, it does include a number of foundations and not-for-profit programs.

This document is by no means a comprehensive list of all the available programs relating to community and regional economic development, however, it does provide a foundation of programs to build from. Each program listed has a brief description, web address, and contact information (as of April, 2016).

Aboriginal Affairs and Northern Development Canada

Aboriginal Business Development Program (ABDP)

The Community Opportunities Readiness funding is available to support First Nations through the developmental phase, as well as with operational land management activities:

- developmental funding assists with the community's approval process,
- development of the land code, and
- negotiation of the individual agreement.

Operational funding is determined through a formula, which is set out in the individual agreement.

Growing Forward 2

Growing Forward 2 programs aim to help the industry position itself to respond to future opportunities and challenges and achieve its full potential as a productive and profitable sector of the Canadian economy. The priorities and programs of Growing Forward 2 reflect the views of producers, processors and other stakeholders, as heard during a two-year review of Growing Forward that included a significant stakeholder engagement process.

In Alberta, Growing Forward 2 will reflect an increased focus on three areas: research and innovation, competitiveness and market development and adaptability and industry capacity. These priorities, advocated and endorsed by stakeholders, are essential to the long-term success of the industry.

Rural Electric Program

The Rural Electric Program commenced in 1947. It is a cost-sharing program, which helps defray the high cost of electrical service to farmers. The Rural Electric Program assists farmers to access a basic, essential service at a reasonable cost and aids in the diversification of our rural economy. It also provides partial equity with other Albertans living in urban areas as well as those living in other western provinces that benefit from lower hook-up costs and power rates sponsored by their provincial governments through Crown corporations.

Alberta Livestock and Meat Agency (ALMA)

A $30-million package of programs is designed to spur innovation and diversification in Alberta's livestock and meat industry. Grant programs, delivered by the Alberta Livestock and Meat Agency (ALMA), will focus on value-added market development, research and development, and industry development. These programs, together with the Growing Forward 2 programs, are part of ALMA's commitment to be a catalyst for change and to help build an internationally respected, competitive and profitable livestock and meat industry. $9-million is also being allocated to bring innovation and efficiency to a whole new level.

Two new initiatives have been created in partnership with Alberta Agriculture and Rural Development, as part of Growing Forward 2, a federal-provincial-territorial initiative, will be delivered through ALMA. These include the Automation and Lean Manufacturing Program and the Business and Product Development Program. ALMA is dedicated to playing a key role in finding more affordable and efficient ways to bringing Alberta livestock and meat products to a growing number of markets around the world.

Species at Risk Public Registry

Aboriginal Fund for Species at Risk

The AFSAR helps Aboriginal organizations and communities across Canada build capacity to enable them to participate actively in the conservation and recovery of species protected under Species at Risk Act (SARA) and species at risk. New funding under the National Conservation Plan announced in 2014 provides further support to the AFSAR for species at risk and also introduced new funding for species that are not at risk. Therefore, going forward, funding under the Program will focus on two distinct funding streams:

1. Stream one focuses on traditional species at risk recovery projects (Species at Risk Stream); and
2. Stream two focuses on projects addressing other priority species beyond the protection and recovery of species at risk under the Species at Risk Act to prevent them from becoming a conservation concern (Prevention stream)

Services for Business

Western Economic Diversification Canada's business development initiatives support a competitive and expanded business sector in Western Canada. We also support a network of community-based organizations that offer business information, small loans or assist with access to small business financing.

WD's Western Innovation (WINN) Initiative is a $100 million five-year federal Initiative that offers repayable contributions for small- and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) with operations in Western Canada to move their new and innovative technologies from the later stages of research and development to the marketplace.

WD's Western Canada Business Service Network consists of several integrated organizations that provide entrepreneurs with services and resources to help Western Canadians start, grow and expand their businesses. This network of more than 100 offices across the west.

WD provides indirect funding for business through a network of community and other organizations that offer small loans or assist with access to small business financing. These loan funds increase the availability of financing to businesses, communities, and groups that face difficulty getting financing, such as people with disabilities.

WD works to increase trade and investment activities in the West by collaborating with partners and non-for-profit organizations on projects that support trade promotion and research, export readiness, international partnerships and investment attraction. Our list of trade and investment resources offers a listing of information, programs and services that are available for small business owners and entrepreneurs.

Economic research and market studies help Western Canadians to understand the role and impact of entrepreneurship.
